MOKENA, ILLINOIS FRIDAY FEBRUARY 27, 1925.

$1.50 PER YEAR

Frankfort Man Seeks Passage of New Bill Into Law

Levi Doty, well known Frankfort humane society officer, who has had the interest of children and animals at heart for many years, called on Senator R. J. Barr Saturday and asked him to use his efforts in having the following provisions enacted into a bill:

Prohibiting the killing of any kind of fowl by sticking a sharp knife down its throat.

Those handling public money shall publish an account every year the amount received, what for, who from and to whom it was paid.

Each Township shall be allowed to elect its own Tax Collector as it had been before.

No person shall be allowed to run an automobile without a front bumper. The author of this petition having been hit by an automobile and would have been injured but for the bumper. Also saw two accidents that would have been fatal if the automobiles had not had bumpers on.

A reward shall be offered for every bank robber or hold-up of at least $500.00.

All tax receipts shall show each item that the tax is paid for.

Mr. Doty contends in his petition that automobiles without bumpers are too dangerous to be allowed to travel on our highways for if a car hits a person the body is likely to be dragged or run over, where as a bumper would prevent this.

Mr. Doty also feels that the amazing large number of bank robberies which have occurred in the state of Illinois ought to be checked in some way and he feels that officials as well as citizens would put forth more effort to catch bank robbers if a reward were offered by each county, hence the request in his petition that a $500 reward be offered by the county for the apprehension of every bank robber as well as hold up man.

Another out standing feature of his petition is his request that all parties handling public money should publish an annual report.

At present very few such reports are published and then only in a town wherein a newspaper is located. Township and school officials and village officials in many instances never publish any statements, and the tax payers do not know what is going on. Only one or two towns in all this territory publish any such reports. The school boards of Mokena and Frankfort never publish reports in a newspaper, but only post a report in the schools at the time of the annual school directors election. The officials contend that the law does not require them to publish their reports in the newspaper.

Mr. Doty also contends that the present system of collecting taxes is not satisfactory and that the old tax collector system was far better. Under the present system deputy collectors must be appointed in each township just the same to collect the taxes, so why not have the old system re-established?

At present the tax receipts fail to show each item that tax is paid for, but under the old system each tax receipt was itemized.

All of the requests made in Doty's petition are of vital importance to the public and it is hoped they will be acted upon favorably.

Tinley League Play Nets $100 Clear

The play "Safety First" which was given at the Saenger Hall, in Tinley Park last Friday night under the auspices of the Epworth League of the German M. E. church of Tinley Park, was very largely attended. Over $100 were cleared. The same play was also presented at the St. John Evangelical church in Mokena on Tuesday night.

District No. 160 Should Be Annexed To Mokena District

That school district 160 located north of Mokena and known as the Marti district, should be annexed to district 159 Mokena, is the contention of L. G. Bruder of Mokena and he is urging his contention by Francis G. Blair, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Springfield.

This district school has been closed for several years and the children of the district are attending the Mokena school and the district is paying for their tuition.

The school tax in this district is 77 cents per $100 assessed valuation. If the taxes of district 160 were paid over to the Mokena school district, it would mean a big reduction in the school tax of the Mokena district which is $2.09 per $100 assessed valuation and if the taxes of district 160 were paid into district 159 it would mean that the Mokena district school tax would be reduced to $1.32 per $100 assessed valuation.

In his letter on this subject to Mr. Bruder, Supt. Blair states that when a school has not been maintained for two consecutive years, it becomes the duty of the trustees of schools without notice or petition to discontinue the district and annex its territory to some adjacent district or districts.

Why then do not the trustees of schools consolidate district 160 with district 159, Mokena? Let us hear what they have to say for themselves on this matter.

Former Mokena Dr. Buys Joliet Lots

Dr. S. J. Coady of Mokena, formerly a physician at Mokena, figured in a prominent real estate deal in Joliet the past week when he purchased the Axling property on Cass street in that city for $37,500.

Dr. Coady purchased the property as an investment, it is understood. Dr. Coady may erect a building on the premises sometime in the future he said.

The property is directly east of the Ottawa Street M. E. church. It has a frontage of 60 feet on Cass Street with a depth of approximately 85 feet.

Liberia Makes Cash Offer for Cappel Farm Near Mokena

The movement to establish a colored colony in New Lenox and Frankfort townships is on afresh. The Liberia Land and Development Company of Chicago who tried to establish such a colony on the Chamberlain farm in New Lenox township last fall, is very active right now in offering to purchase for cash, farms adjoining the Chamberlain farm. Mrs. Elizabeth Cappel of Mokena who owns two farms in Frankfort township has been approached the past week for the purchase of her farm of 200 acres now tenanted by Aug. Hauck.

Mr. Lane, general manager of The Liberia Company, in a letter to name her cash price for the farm mentioned, saying the company's purchasing agent from New York is in Chicago now and is ready to close deals for the farm properties desired.

Box Social Clears $58

The box social given at the St. John Evangelical church at Mokena by the Brotherhood of that church on Friday night was quite well attended. About $58 were cleared from the sale of lunch boxes which were auctioned by Chas. Erickson. The highest bid for a lunch was $5.25.

Beatty Lumber Co. Buys Out Orland Lumber Yard

A very important business change took place the past week when the I. N. R. Beatty Lumber Co., of Morris, Ill., purchased the business of Charles Hahnelein at 143rd Street and 96th Avenue, at Orland, Ill., making a total of 5 yards which the Beatty Lumber Company is now operating. It is understood that Mr. Hahnelein is contemplating removing to California.

I. N. R. Beatty, president of the company, in announcing the purchase of Mr. Hahnelein's business, said immediate steps would be taken to build new modern sheds, offices and display rooms at Orland so that the same quality of service could be given there as is offered at the other four yards of the company.

With the purchase of this additional yard, several changes have been made in the personnel of the office at Morris. George Gore, an employee for several years, will become manager of the Orland yard. Henry Newman, associated with the company for eight years, will assume the management of the Morris yard as well as act as general accountant for the firm.

I. N. R. Beatty will devote his entire time to the general management of the company, and Harvey R. Beatty will head the purchasing department under the reorganization plans.

Organized in 1884 by Thomas H. Ross, the firm began its growth almost from the start under the able management of Mr. Beatty who entered the company a few years later. It was incorporated in 1901 and the name changed to its present title a few years after Mr. Ross' death.

Since that time Mr. Beatty has so ably managed the operation and enlarged its facilities until today yards are in operation in Pontiac, Wilmington, Tinley Park and Morris.

The growth of the company, Mr. Beatty said, has been due to the advantage it has in its large purchasing power for the many yards in operation, thus effecting a saving which is passed on to the customers. The service of the company is another point in which Mr. Beatty has taken special pride, each yard being equipped with display rooms where plans for homes as well as displays can be shown prospective home builders.

Orland is a fast growing suburb of Chicago and is located in the wooded section of southern Cook county neighboring the Southmoor Country Club and Palos Park, another fast growing suburb two miles away.

Radio Fans Note

Instructions to its representatives have been given by the Public Service Company which relate to radio aerials installed in the Company's territory. No attachments of them is to be permitted to any of the poles nor shall they be installed over or under lines carrying electric current except in the cases of secondary service drops.

In cases of such aerials where the line is located in the public streets or alleys, the Company's linemen should remove the aerial, coil it up, and deliver it to the owner, explaining at the time the hazard which makes necessary this action.

Lights Blind; Strikes Bridge

While John Cappel was driving home in his Ford Saturday evening he struck the side of a concrete bridge south of the Mokena limits when he turned out of the road to let another car pass by. Mr. Cappel says that the car had blinding head lights which blinded him so he could not see how far he was turning out of the road. The radiator of Mr. Cappel's car was damaged by the impact with the bridge, but luckily Mr. Cappel escaped injury.

Where Taxes Go

Mr. F. H. Morrow of Palos Park is writing a series of very interesting articles and this week we take pleasure in printing a highly interesting article on taxation, a subject which is always of interest to the average American property owner. On reading this article you will see what it costs to run a first class government like ours.

The second and last installment of this article will be run in our next issue.

The Editor

Our tax bill for 1924 was $10,045,000,000. Surely these are startling figures. This is an average of $90.77 for every man, woman and child in these United States. How can we carry such a burden? The answer is that fully 75 per cent of this amount is simply payment for actual service that in past years was either preformed by private enterprise at a greater burden to our people or not preformed at all.

Of this seemingly tremendous burden $3,459,000,000 is our contribution to the Federal Government and of this amount 75 per cent or $2,593,500,000 is for purely collateral of war debt, pensions, preparations for future war which is euphemistically referred to by our military friends as "Defense".

Of the allotment to our Federal Government 25 per cent or the sum of $864,500,000 is for purely civil service. I defy our most pessimistic friend to point out a more efficient service and a greater value to a constituency than is returned to the people by the eight purely civil departments of our Federal Government viz: the departments of State, Treasury, Attorney General, Post Office, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce and Labor.

Even our Army and Navy whose functions are presumed to relate entirely to war are each year giving us service of a purely production character of the very greatest value.

White Store Buys Art Lennon Stock

Mr. Cohen has had all the stock White Store, 405 Cass street, Joliet, has purchased the stock of the Art Lennon Company clothing store located on North Chicago street. The deal was closed the first of the week and the stock of this concern is now on sale at the White Store.

Art Lennon has been conducting a clothing business in Joliet for the past 40 years and has been doing business in his late location for the past 20 years. This store has had the reputation of handling high class clothes.

About a year ago or more this concern went thru bankruptcy and then started over again.

Mr. Cohen has also purchased the entire stock of the B. & A. Clothing Co., store on North Chicago street from the U. S. Court thru a bankruptcy proceeding at about 25 cents on the dollar.

Mr. Cohen has had all the stock of these two stores moved over to the White Store on Cass street and a great sale is now in progress.

Mokena to Have Hot Election

Mokena is going to have a real hot village election from present indications. A ticket has been drafted and three candidates for the offices of village trustees have been chosen. They are, Herman Schweser, local manager of the Bowman Dairy Plant, Harvey Reab and Wm. Lynk. The new ticket will be nominated by petition, the petitions to be filed with the village clerk sometime next month. The village election will be held on the third Tuesday in April.

These candidates are progressive men and if elected will put some pep in our village board. Every voter in Mokena should make it their duty to vote at this election.

Our magnificent body of army engineers have rendered most important service in developing our rivers and harbors. Our water ways which carry more freight than the 80,000 miles of perfected canals of Continental Europe have been constructed by our army engineers. The successful building of the Panama Canal—a scientific achievement by Dr. Gorgan and General Goethals is fresh in our minds and is entirely the work of our army engineers. Most recently the army constructed the Alaska railroad.

The Navy Observatory under the Navy has been a valuable civil service. We must recall that their most interesting achievements was the determination of the velocity of light by Prof. Michaelson and the late Prof. Simon Newcomb. The work of the Navy Observatory in the measurement of time finds a counter part in the careful service as made by the Hydrographic office in harbors out side of the U. S.

Under our State Department come the Consular service with nearly 800 representatives in foreign countries and universally considered the most efficient body of men sent out by any nation. organization is considered as America's lookout on the watch tower of International Trade. In spite of our Protective Tariffs and other devices for hampering commerce we still have a foreign trade of more than $6,000,000,000.

Our consular service co operates with our foreign ambassadors, ministers and other dignitaries whose functions are almost entirely diplomatic.

The Treasury has its indispensable functions relating to coinage, internal revenue and directing the immense financial affairs of the Government.

The Post Office Department aside from carrying the mails operates the parcel post, the postal savings bank. The relatively slight deficit in this department is offset by the service rendered the Government in carrying its own documentary mail. It must also be remembered that there has been no advance in cost of carrying either letters or parcels by the government in spite of increased wages and increased cost of every department of service and every cost of material. Notwithstanding this mounting cost the deficit has steadily decreased.

The Interior Department directs the Bureau of Education, Indian Affairs, Reclamation, Geological survey, Patent Office, National Parks and several other purely civic activities.

CHAS. TINLEY PASSES BEYOND

Chas. Tinley, aged 84 years, veteran railroad man, died at his home 7230 Yale Ave., Chicago, Saturday.

Mr. Tinley was known all along the Rock Island system, having served as conductor for many years. He was active until about 12 years ago when he was injured and retired from service. He was a very familiar figure at Tinley Park, coming out often, as he had a farm there in which he took especial interest.

His father, Sam Tinley was station agent at Tinley Park for many years and the name of the village was changed from Bremen to Tinley Park in honor of Mr. Tinley.

The deceased was a member of a number of fraternal societies. Funeral services were held on Tuesday. Burial in Mount Greenwood.

Hilton Files Appeal From Jury Ruling On Conservator

An appeal from a decision in the probate court finding him incompetent to manage his own business affairs has been taken to the circuit court by George Hilton of New Lenox.

A conservator was appointed for Mr. Hilton Dec. 24, 1923. Last month he filed a petition in the probate court asking that the conservator be removed and that he be restored to his property rights.

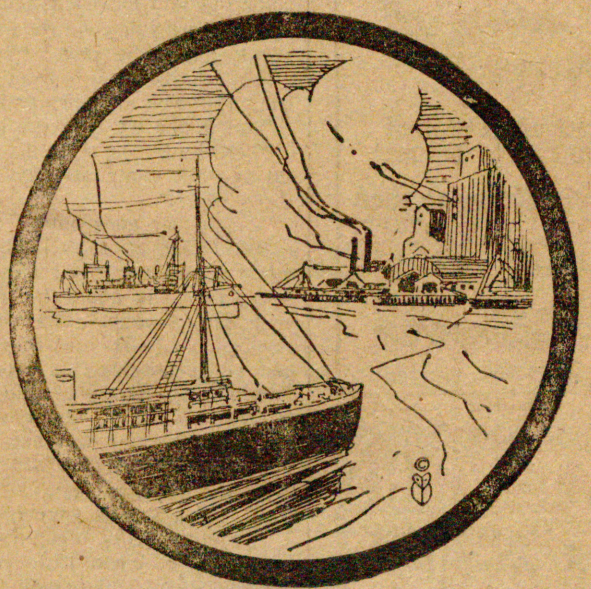

The case was tried before a jury which returned a verdict declaring that Mr. Hilton was not competent to manage his own affairs and recommended that the conservator be retained.

Now Mr. Hilton desires to fight the case out in the circuit court. He is represented by D. R. Anderson. The conservator, A. N. Hilton, of Symerton, is represented by O. R. Laraway. A. N. Hilton and George Hilton are cousins.

Orland Special License Ordinances Declared Void

The Orland Village Board has a problem on their hands since their special license ordinances have been declared void.

About a year ago the village council passed a number of ordinances providing for the payment of special license by every business. Continued on back page

SOMETHING HIDDEN

SYNOPSIS. — Nurses in the Southern hospital at Avonmouth are angered by the insolent treatment accorded them by Dr. John Lancaster, head of the institution, and there is a general feeling of unrest, into which Joan Wentworth, probationary nurse, is drawn. Doctor Lancaster is performing a difficult operation, for which he has won fame. Joan, with other nurses, is in attendance. She is upset, through no fault of her own, and makes a trivial blunder at a critical moment. The patient dies and Doctor Lancaster accuses her of clumsiness. She is suspended, the action meaning the end of her hope of a career as a nurse. Without relatives or friends, and desperate, Joan, urged by her landlady, goes to Doctor Lancaster's office to ask him to overlook her blunder and reinstate her. She overhears a violent altercation between Doctor Lancaster and other men who does not see. Joan is struck by the favorable change in the appearance and demeanor of the doctor, recalling that at times in the hospital he has been gentle and thoughtful and at others suspicious and bullying. He tells her he can do nothing for her at the hospital, but offers her a position in a nursing institution in the country, telling her she can be of "great assistance" to him. A man named Myers demands she tell him what the doctor had said to her. She denies him the information, and he covertly threatens her. At the institution, which is owned by Doctor Lancaster, Joan finds Myers. He tells her he is the secretary. She instinctively dislikes and fears him.

CHAPTER IV—Continued

The girl, after a moment's hesitation, preceded Mrs. Fraser into the building. She saw a long corridor, with a number of doors on either side, and the stairs in front of her.

"You would like to see the building, Miss Wentworth?" asked the matron. "Or perhaps you are tired and would prefer to go to your room."

"No, I should like to see it. Have you many patients?"

"Only Mrs. Dana. She's always here, you know. There was a boy with a broken arm, but he left this morning. In winter, though, we're often crowded. It isn't much of a place, Miss Wentworth, but we do a little good. This is the doctor's apartment. He sleeps here; next door is the clinic, and next to that the operating room. Here we keep the supplies. This is my room. Mr. Myers, the secretary, has his room opposite the doctor's. This is the dining room, and here is the kitchen. Now I'll show you your room upstairs, Miss Wentworth."

The corridor above was a replica of the one below. At the head of the stairs a little passage branched off toward a large window in the wall, with a door to one side of it.

"Mrs. Dana occupies this room," said the matron. "Perhaps the doctor mentioned her?"

"Doctor Lancaster said something—" "She is out of her mind, poor woman, but she is perfectly quiet. You see, Miss Wentworth, she is like an infant mentally. She will not trouble you. Excuse me a moment."

She drew a key from the bunch that hung at her waist and unlocked the door very softly, and with a certain furtiveness, Joan thought. Looking in, the girl saw a strikingly handsome woman of about seven and thirty years, seated in a chair beside a window, with a shawl over her knees. She was in a dressing gown, and her hair hung over her shoulders in two braids. She did not look up or stir as the matron entered, and Mrs. Fraser, after closing the door behind her, presently came out and locked it again.

"I'll show you your room now, Miss Wentworth," she said. "You will be alone on this floor except for Mrs. Dana, but you are not afraid of her?"

"Not in the least. Is she incurable?" "Yes, quite, poor thing. She has sat in that chair all day for nearly three years."

"And never goes out?"

"Out? No, we don't let her out. It might excite her. But I am not supposed to speak about the cases. It's very sad, though. She comes of a very good family, and they neglected her when she was in trouble, Miss Wentworth, and she's as good as dead to everyone now. She never speaks, but I don't know whether she could. I've never heard her since I came here three years ago. This is the ward. And this is your room."

The open doors along the corridor had revealed clean little rooms with iron bedsteads and plain furniture; the room at the end of the passage, however, was well furnished, with a heavy new carpet and old mahogany furniture. Outside the window, through the twilight, appeared the distant mountains.

Joan, turning, was surprised to see Mrs. Fraser watching her intently. As their eyes met the matron lowered her own in some confusion. There was a furtiveness about her glance that momentarily revived Joan's uneasiness. It was a strange journey, and Doctor Lancaster's behavior had been strange. Then there was the man Myers. Joan felt a sudden sinking of the heart; she was almost regretful that she had come.

A colored maid brought up her suitcase.

"This is Lucy," said the matron. "She will do anything you tell her."

She sleeps overhead in the attic. And my room is underneath," she added; "so if you should want anything at any time, just tap on the radiator, and I'll come up at once. And supper will be ready as soon as you are."

In the hall Joan found Mrs. Fraser, ten minutes later, talking to the secretary.

"Miss Wentworth, this is Mr. Myers," she began.

"We've met already," said Myers, scrutinizing her closely. He seemed now to wear the same furtive air as Mrs. Fraser; it seemed part of the atmosphere of the institution. Joan had perceived it in the coachman, too.

"Miss Wentworth is to have charge of the nursing under Doctor Jenkins," said Mrs. Fraser.

"I hope I shan't conflict with—" began Joan doubtfully.

"Not at all, not at all," said Myers, speaking with false heartiness. "I hope we shall all get along well together."

Joan refused to face the problem of Myers' undoubted hostility. She went into the dining room, and found to her relief that the table was only laid for one.

"Mr. Myers has had supper?" she asked.

"You are to have your meals alone, Miss Wentworth," answered the matron.

"But I should not wish—" "It is the doctor's orders," said Mrs. Fraser, in a tone of finality.

Coming in with the dessert, Mrs. Fraser found her nodding at the table. The girl had begun to feel an intense fatigue after the all-day journey. She began to realize, too, that her work at the hospital had been harder than she had known.

"I believe I shall go straight to bed," she said.

"The best thing you can do, Miss Wentworth. Everybody feels sleepy when they first arrive here. It's the hill air. You must rest well, Miss Wentworth, and please remember it's you who give the orders."

She preceded her up the stairs, carrying an oil lamp. She set it down in Joan's room, and then she seemed to hesitate.

"Miss Wentworth," she said, "the doctor wants us to do everything we can to make you comfortable. There isn't likely to be any work unless some patient comes in. You were not to attend Mrs. Dana, I think?"

She Would Remain. She Decided That While She Was Dressing.

"I was told not."

"That's so, Miss Wentworth." The matron's air was a very decided one, and again conveyed the impression of something hidden, which was, further, meant to remain hidden. "The doctor wired me that. I don't suppose he said anything about Mrs. Dana to you? Or—Mr. Myers?"

Her stealthy watchfulness now seemed of ominous portent, and the matron made no attempt to suppress the eagerness with which she awaited Joan's answer.

"No, Doctor Lancaster said nothing," answered the girl.

Then, seeing that the matron was still regarding her doubtfully, she added:

"But is not Doctor Jenkins resident here? I have not seen him yet, you know."

The matron stared at her in astonishment. "Why, Miss Wentworth, that was Doctor Jenkins who drove you up from the station! Didn't you know?" she asked.

"That was Doctor Jenkins?"

"I thought Doctor Lancaster would have told you about him. He's a graduate of Johns Hopkins. Old Doctor Lancaster wanted to build up an institution here where we'll have people could work among our own. But the plan fell through. You see, the hospital in Avonmouth got hold of most of the money, and then—there were other difficulties. I don't know about them—I've only been here three years, and Doctor Jenkins wasn't graduated then, and we never pay attention to the gossip of the villagers."

She checked herself hastily, as if she was afraid of compromising herself.

"Doctor Jenkins has given up his life to the work here," she continued. "He lives at Millville, but we hope some time that Doctor Lancaster will build up the place again, if only—"

"If only he—"

There was almost a look of agony on her face, and again she turned her eyes upon Joan's face as if to search out her thoughts. Then, with an abrupt "good night," she turned away.

Joan called to her as she was leaving the room. "Mrs. Fraser," she said, "I understood there was a patient here besides Mrs. Dana."

The matron turned slowly round. "There was the boy who left this morning," she said inquiringly.

"But I understood from Doctor Lancaster—at least, he didn't tell me in so many words, but he gave me to understand that there was a special case here, requiring care and sympathy."

The matron stared at her. "No, there's nobody," she said. "Nobody except—"

Suddenly she uttered a convulsive sound, and, putting her hands over her face, ran from the room. Joan heard her stumbling down the corridor outside as if she had gone blind.

She stood irresolute in her room. Her sleepiness was gone; she was afraid, and she seemed to have got out of her depth. It had begun with John Lancaster's strange behavior in his office the evening before. She had not been able then to reconcile him in any way with the Lancaster whom she had seen, smug, self-satisfied and vain, in the operating room, the bully who kept the nurses in agitation and fear, though he was the traditional John Lancaster of whom she had heard. Then there was the man Myers, equally strange; and the matron. Some mystery was at the heart of it all; and Joan was the more afraid because the reason for her fear was unknown to her.

Her sleepiness was gone. She stood beside the window, looking out into the darkness. A whippoorwill was calling monotonously among the pines; here and there among the hills a solitary light was twinkling. The air was cool and balsam scented. It was like the dearly remembered days at home. But in the heart of that peace was apprehension.

Looking back now, Joan thought that she had undertaken a rash and extraordinary adventure in coming so far from Avonmouth alone, and at the proposal of a man whose reputation was an evil one. She would go home on the morrow.

Something was wrong, and in spite of his apparent kindness an inner prompting warned her to beware of Lancaster. He was at the heart of all this, and had enmeshed her in some scheme for his own purposes. She locked her door and went to bed, to sleep restlessly.

Chapter V

When she awakened it was morning. The sun was streaming brightly into the room. Through the window Joan saw a scene of exquisite beauty in the rolling hills, the winding road, the forest glades. Underneath the chickens were scrambling for the corn which the matron was flinging to them. A thousand birds were awing, the universal robin and the bluebird of her beloved home. The dew lay heavy on the leaves and grass. Joan felt a sudden ecstasy. This was her own country, and she had come back to it. Her fears were dissipated with the night shadows.

She would remain. She decided that while she was dressing. And yet a doubt was in her heart. And with it came the remembrance of something that had disturbed her during the night. Filtering into her consciousness came the recollection of an automobile rolling up to the door, and of men's voices conversing in low tones under her window. Then the machine had rolled away. It must have been about two in the morning.

Perhaps a patient had been brought to the institute, thought the girl, as she went downstairs. Mrs. Fraser's door was closed, and the only person astride seemed to be the colored maid, who nodded and smiled as she looked up from her sweeping. Joan began to pace the long verandah in front of the building, looking out across the hills and thinking over her situation.

Perhaps it was only morbidness, or mental fatigue, that had made her read things in the faces of Myers and Mrs. Fraser which did not exist there. Perhaps the day would disclose her position more definitely.

She was walking past the open door of the building when she saw a man leaving the doctor's room. It was Myers, the secretary. He saw Joan and came briskly out upon the verandah.

"Good morning, Miss Wentworth," he said, in his rasping tones. "Pleasant weather, isn't it? Much better here than in the heat of Avonmouth!" "How do you do, Mr. Myers," said Joan, trying to overcome her instinctive disgust of the man. "You have a new patient here, haven't you?"

He looked at her with a sort of quizzical shrewdness. "What makes you think that, Miss Wentworth?" he inquired.

Evidently the institution is a place of mystery. And what brings Doctor Lancaster?

No Danger From Comets The Naval Observatory says that the mass of a comet is never large; and the material is, for the most part, exceedingly tenuous. It is probable that the earth, if struck by a comet, would witness nothing more than a meteoric shower. The explosions, if any, would be similar to those hitherto observed in the case of large meteors.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN Editor of "HEALTH"

(© 1926, Western Newspaper Union.)

KEEPING OLD PEOPLE CHEERFUL

THERE are more old people today than ever before. This is naturally the result of improved living conditions and the control of disease. The average duration of life has more than doubled in the last hundred years. Ten years ago, it was 46½ years; today it is 55 years. As the average increases the number of persons who live far beyond the average also increases.

Old age has its especial problems, just as infancy and childhood have theirs. One of the most important is mental rather than physical. Old people must be kept cheerful, happy and contented.

That this is of the greatest value in the care of the aged is shown by the fact that Dr. Hugh S. Cumming, surgeon general of the United States public health service, considers it important enough to discuss in a recent article.

"There is too much of a tendency in persons reaching a certain age to persuade themselves that they have reached the last page of the book of life," says Doctor Cumming. "Many seem to think that both mental and physical activity should be given up. Exactly the contrary is true. Every effort should be made to preserve such an equanimity of mind and purpose that old age will become a period of comfort and enjoyment."

One of the most important necessities for the aged is some kind of occupation. After the ordinary activities of life are given up and the old man no longer goes to the office or the workshop and the old housewife is relieved of her daily routine, the danger is that they will become morbid, despondent and self-centered. Living only in their thoughts of the past and brooding over the mistakes and the disappointments of earlier life.

There are many occupations which are well adapted for the old. Reading, either of newspapers, magazines or books, is beneficial and diverting to the old person. Light occupations, such as sewing, weaving, simple carpenter work, and tinkering about the house," fill in many idle hours. Most old persons find keen pleasure in conversation and in social gatherings of all kinds. In many cases they especially enjoy contact with younger people. Radio broadcasting has opened up an entirely new pleasure for the aged, as it has for the invalid and the bedridden. It is particularly adapted to those with poor sight of hearing.

While old people need and should have more rest and sleep than younger persons, they should not be kept in bed unless it is necessary. Old persons are especially influenced by suggestion and if they are led to regard themselves as invalids they will soon persuade themselves that they are much worse than they are.

WHAT ARE WE MADE OF?

WHAT is your body made of? You know in a general way but not in any way that you can grasp. When the newspaper or magazine writer wants his readers to appreciate the value of some large amount of money, he tells how many times around the earth it would go in hundred-dollar bills laid end to end, or how many times higher than the Woolworth building or the Washington monument, if piled up in the form of silver dollars. To comprehend things beyond our own knowledge, we have to have some kind of a mental yardstick.

In a recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association Dr. Georgene Luten of the Mayo clinic gives some interesting facts about the human body.

The total amount of blood in the body would half fill an ordinary bucket; the fat would make seven bars of soap; the iron would be enough for a middle-sized nail. There is lime enough in the bones to whitewash a chicken-coop; phosphorus enough to make 2,200 matches. The blood contains about a teaspoonful of sugar and a tablespoonful of salt. Normal blood contains about 5,000,000,000 red corpuscles for every cubic millimeter, so that the total number of red blood cells would be about 25,000,000,000,000.

Much has been said lately about the absence of iodine in the body causing goiter. Evidently, only a small amount of this substance is necessary to preserve health since the iodine in the entire body amounts to only 1-100 of a gram, or about 1½ grains. The total amount of uric acid in the blood is from two to three grains, yet this small amount can be accurately measured from a few drops of blood. Still more delicate are the tests for some other substances. Epinephrin, a substance given off by the adrenal glands, can be detected in a solution of 1 to 330,000,000. You will get the same strength solution if you poured a small glass of whisky into the contents of 1,320 street sprinkling carts, which would form a procession about six miles long.

When we are dealing with a machine as scientific and delicate as the human body it isn't any wonder that little things will sometimes affect its workings.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Christian Experience and Activity

By REV. JOHN C. PAGE

Teacher of Bible Doctrine, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth that we should be a kind of first fruits of His creatures; wherefore, my beloved brethren, let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath.—Jas. 1:18-19.

Two outstanding words of the New Testament are "grace" and "faith." "By grace are ye saved through faith." The doctrines of grace lead to the life of faith. "The life that I now live in the flesh," says the great apostle, "I live by faith in the Son of God." This may be regarded as the abiding principle on which the Christian life must be lived, namely, faith in the Son of God.

Faith must be exposed to trial in order to grow. It must be tested and tried. The purpose of this is stated in the opening verses of this epistle by James. Ethical teaching runs all through it. It emphasizes the demands of righteousness and justice and calls to unselfishness and service. The outward walk and activity of a Christian believer's life is regarded as the expression and proof of his inward faith.

Behind this activity there is an experience to which our text refers. It is the same experience as our Lord had in mind when in His conversation with Nicodemus. He uttered the words, "Ye must be born again." This very truth appears in the text where the source, method and purpose of the new birth is unfolded. As to its source, it is a matter of Sovereign grace. "Of His own will begat He us." "The Word bloweth where it listeth and thou hearest the sound thereof but cannot tell whence it cometh or whither it goeth, so is everyone that is born of the Spirit." If we ask, as did Nicodemus, "How can these things be?" or, what is the method?—the answer is, "by the Word of truth." Peter has this in mind when he writes the words, "He hath given unto us exceeding great and precious promises that by these ye may become partakers of the divine nature." In other words, God's gracious provision has been revealed to us in His Word, which is the word of truth. This provision centers in Christ and His atoning work. The Son of Man has been lifted up even as was the serpent in the wilderness and now the Word of truth declares that "whosoever believeth in Him shall not perish but have eternal life." So then, it may be said as our text affirms, that God of His own will begat us with the Word of truth. His Sovereign grace operates in begetting a new life in the soul of those who believe the Word of truth. The words immediately following disclose the purpose of this, namely, that we should be a kind of first fruits of His creatures, that is, the first section of the army of the redeemed. The first fruits are samples of what is to follow. Christian believers are samples or products of God's redeeming grace and power. When a salesman goes out to represent some business house, he takes with him some samples of the products of that house and with these he secures orders. In many of our modern hotels there are sample rooms where products are displayed and orders for goods taken. As these samples show what the business house is able to produce, so must redeemed souls show forth the glory of Him that called us out of darkness into His marvelous light.

Following this experience, designated in the text as a divine begetting, the duties and tasks of the Christian life are considered. The first of these is indicated in the words, "Let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath." The most imperative duty of the Christian is to "be swift to hear" the voice of God in the midst of many voices that perpetually call us. We must be eager and alert to hear His voice. This attitude will lead to increased communion and enable us more quickly to detect the divine leading. "Be ye not unwise, but understanding what the will of the Lord is." We get accustomed to, and acquainted with, the voices we hear frequently and can at once recognize who is speaking even though we do not see the speaker. As a mother will instantly recognize the voice of her child and the child recognize that of the parent, so may we through the cultivation of fellowship with God and alertness to hear His voice, become acquainted with it and distinguish it easily in the midst of the babel of confusion caused by the many false voices around us. "My sheep hear My voice and I know them and they follow Me."

Continuance in Well Doing
"And he said unto the king of Israel, Smite upon the ground. And he smote thrice, and stayed."—II Kings 13:18. This ancient king was guilty of a fault that is all too common nowadays. He started a good work but stayed his hand. He lacked the grace of continuance and failed to complete his task. Maybe some of us who read this Meditation belong to the Order of Fits and Starts—the ranks of those who never finish anything!

"OLD-SALT" TALES

By CAPTAIN IRA PERKINS

(Copyright.)

The Rainbow Pearl

"THE price of that one black pearl would more than buy you, boys, the clubhouse you want," said Captain Ira, as he gave a last deft twist to the rope he was splicing. Then, with a sudden, quick sweep of his hand, he drove the marlin-spike he had been using deep into the heavy oak plank of the bench on which he sat.

"Say, but you're strong!" blurted out Tommy in open admiration. The other nine boys who made up the club, nodded their heads in assent to this.

"About that black pearl," began Bobby, who, as you may know, is Tommy's twin brother. "Was it a real pearl, and how did it grow that way, and please tell us why the East Indian gave it to you?"

Captain Ira glanced out through the window port on the starboard side of his houseboat. He thought. Then he asked: "Do you see that new yacht over there? It's the one with the twinkling brass trimmings. Well, I was cabin boy on a bark near about her tonnage. The way I came to be there was that her captain picked me off the sumpson dock in Hongkong. He took pity on me, I believe, because I was such a little chap to be so near starved, and showing it."

"In all my life the world never looked better and brighter than it did on the morning we set sail."

"The captain of the barque was a tall, square-jawed Scot named McArthur. He was the kindest, and withal the fairest-minded, of any skipper under whom I ever sailed. He was known all about the Southern Islands for these same qualities and whatever trading business was in hand, Captain McArthur would be certain to win a goodly share of it."

"It was under these conditions that we worked back and forth in the seaward islands of an archipelago to the south and east of Borneo."

"There was one of these islands, called by the natives 'Tahipeet', on which a town of some size was set, and about the coral reefs of which many of the finest pearls in the South seas were taken. There also was fresh water handy to the anchorage."

"It was during one of our frequent visits here that I went along with the captain and a party of sailors to one of the pearl-shell beds where the native divers were at work."

"We stayed for a time and were watching a copper-skinned boy of about my own age, who was one of the most expert divers in the group."

"He had been down longer than usual this time. Just as he started his upward shove, a sharp fin cut the surface of the water near us. It was a shark. On he came. Up rose the boy. Closer—closer—A shout went up from the natives. It looked like certain death for the boy. Then I thought of my boat hook. Grasping it firmly in both hands, I lunged. The point of it jabbed the shark full in the middle of the throat. As his teeth snapped shut he was so near the native boy that the toes of the boy's right foot were caught and crushed."

"In the meantime I had been tumbled overboard by the force of my own blow."

"The sailors hove both of us aboard the yawl and, shortly after, rowed back to the ship with us. Once there, I got into some dry clothes. As to the native boy, our ship doctor treated his lacerated foot and we put him to bed in a spare berth in the after-cuddy. He was with us for three days before the doctor would let him go home. It was about four bells on the forward watch of the third night that I was awakened by a soft native voice whispering words which I did not understand into my ear. Then a small packet was thrust into my hand and the native boy left me. Never again did I see him, for shortly after, we set sail from the island and a little later left those waters to return no more."

"As you may have guessed, in the packet which the native boy gave me was the black pearl. I carried it for some years hung in a parchment bag about my neck. When I came to be a man, I sold it for many thousand rupees to an East Indian prince. It is still in the possession of his family today and is called the Rainbow Pearl, on account of its unusual life and brilliancy."

"With the money that pearl brought me I bought my first boat, 'The Merry Ann.' Some other time I may tell you how I came to lose her and along with her, very nearly, my life."

"And superstitious sailors men have as much as told me that I could expect nothing better of a boat which had been bought with money got from the sale of a gift—but that's all as may be, and as in a way of thinking."

Get rid of constipation
by internal cleanliness

HEADACHES, biliousness, sleepless nights, heaviness, are Nature's warning that intestinal poisons are flooding your system. If this is allowed to continue, you may become a victim of serious organic disease.

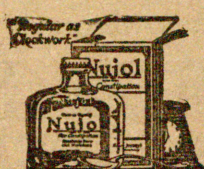

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favour Lubrication

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

BACHELORS GROVE LUTHERAN CHURCH

Wm. Greve, Pastor.
Regular German services are conducted every Sunday and church holidays at 10 A. M. During the season of Lent, special topics of the history of the passion of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ will be the subject of the sermons. "Christ in Gethsemane" is the subject for next Sunday.

The English services of last Sunday were called off on account of the fog and bad condition of the roads. Only a few undaunted worshippers ventured out. The next English service is scheduled to take place on the 4th Sunday in March.

The Young People's Society will have its regular meeting on Thursday March, 5th.

The Ladies Aid Society meets on Sunday March 8th.

ZION LUTHERAN CHURCH.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Henke was recently baptised Elmer, being the name given.

Lenten services will be held every Friday evening at 8 o'clock.

The Ladies Aid will meet with Mrs. Fred Goebel next Wednesday March 4th.

The Luther League meets at the school house next Thursday evening.

TINLEY PARK M. E. CHURCH

L. F. Flynn, Pastor.

The Tinley Park English M. E. church is showing quite a progressive spirit lately. They are planning to observe the 28th anniversary of the church sometime in April and in connection with that event will have a home-coming of all old friends. It is to be an all day Sunday celebration.

Last Sunday morning Evangelist John Hopkins preached a very splendid and inspiring sermon.

An Epworth League has been organized and the installation of the officers took place at the evening service. Following are the officers installed: Pres. Mrs. Edna Deval; 1st. Vice Pres., Dept. of spiritual Mrs. Grace Rauch; 2nd. Vice Pres., dept. of missionary work, Miss Edna Deval; 3rd Vice Pres., Dept. of Mercy and Help, Mrs. Hirsch; 4th Vice Pres., Dept. of social service, Mrs. J. Griswold. Sec. Miss Gladys Deval and Treas., Miss Geraldine Hirsch. A duet was sung at this service by Mrs. L. F. Flynn and Mrs. Grace Rauch.

Sunday School 10 A. M.
Regular morning service 11 A. M.
Evening service 6:45 P. M.

Dr. Ralston, dean from Moody Bible Institute will preach. Dr. Ralston being a difficult man to procure, we consider ourselves fortunate in being able to present a speaker of his ability. Special music will be rendered by a trio composed of a violin, cornet, and saw. Everybody invited to come.

The movement for a community club in Tinley Park is gaining much headway and another meeting was held Wednesday night to perfect plans for the organization of the club.

It is proposed to charge a small monthly fee in order to start a working fund.

The object of the club is to further the interests of the school and community. The plans are to have the community club purchase the old school building for a community house and it would be used for all social activities of the community.

The one time Dramatic Club has about $500 in its treasury and it is understood the former members are ready to use this money toward purchasing the old school building.

It is hoped that the project will go over big as it will mean much to Tinley Park.

The former Dramatic Club had a fine library and for a long time it has been idle so of late the books have been offered to start a library for the public school. The books are being sorted so that those best suited for a school library will be used.

The Rock Island railroad is planning to make improvements on their local depot property and material has been received for this work.

GERMAN M. E. CHURCH

7:30 P. M. English Service.

Beginning with March 4th special Mid-week Lenten services will be held every Wednesday night at 7:30 p. m.

March 4—"Father Forgive Them!" (Luke 23:34)

March 11—Christ's Comrade in Death" (Luke 23:42)

March 18—The Forsaken Christ. (Matt. 27:48)

March 25—The Savior's Thirst. (John 19:28)

April 1—A Finished Work. (John 19:30)

April 8—How to Meet Death Aright (Luke 23:46)

Good Friday, April 10—10:30 a. m. Communion service in German. English service and Holy Communion 7:30 p. m.

A most cordial invitation is here with extended to you and your friends to attend all the services. Come and hear what Jesus has done to save you from your sins. We need the strength of the Word of the Cross more than ever. To eat no meat, to go to no show or dance is just an outward observance of Lent and has but little value. Turn your heart to Christ. Make Lent a special season of Bible reading, prayer, church attendance and soul winning. Help someone to turn to Christ and His church. These are things which count. Do make Lent to count for something in your life and your neighbors.

Postmaster, Dies

G. L. Hilton, aged 78 years, died at Silver Cross hospital, Joliet, Wednesday afternoon at 3:30, following an illness of several weeks. He was first stricken with blood poison, then erysipelas and pneumonia setting in.

Mr. Hilton was indelibly identified with the interests of New Lenox. He served as postmaster for many years. He also conducted a grain elevator and general store, which he disposed of to H. N. Dickenson quite a few years ago. He did much to up-build New Lenox. When the old traction line was first built to New Lenox, he boosted the project with his time and money. He also did much to upbuild the village, having erected 5 dwellings in his time. After the old M. E. church building was removed, he purchased the lots and erected 3 modern dwellings.

At one time he also conducted a feed business and general store at Mokena.

G. L. Hilton was born in North Anson, Somerset County, Maine. He came to New Lenox 60 years ago. He was preceded in death by three children and two years ago his wife died following an accident.

Funeral services will be held on Sunday from the New Lenox M. E. church at 2:00 o'clock, Rev. Mr. Frye officiating. Burial in Maplewood cemetery.

Those who survive him are a brother Kinney and a sister, Mrs. Sarah J. Paine who have been living with Mr. Hilton for the past year.

Save on Your Gas and See the Scenery!

By WILLIAM E. KNOX
President American Bankers Association.

A long, long time ago, a very great teacher said, "Man shall not live by bread alone." That is true. A man who lives by bread alone and simply feeds his body will be nothing more than an animal. There is more than bread that goes to the making of a life. There are the things of the mind and the spirit, and we are all of us making a great mistake if we measure success in this world by material things. Material things are all right and ought to be emphasized to some extent, but they should not occupy more than their proper place in the scheme of things. Over and above and beyond them are the things of the intellect, and over and above those are the things of the spirit, the finer things of life. If, in reaching out for material prosperity, we forget those things, we may get the material prosperity, but we will not get true joy and true happiness out of life. I want to commend to every one that, in addition to striving for the good things of this life which are good in their way, to remember the other things also.

I promise you if you do that, it will not make any difference whether you get great rewards or not; it will not make any difference whether you arrive at high position or not. You will have instead a great inward satisfaction, and you will feel that you have lived a pretty good life and had a good time while you were doing it.

Have your good time as you go along. Don't be like the automobilists that go whizzing over the country at sixty miles an hour and arrive at their destinations at the end of the day's run not having seen the beauties of the country they went through; having seen nothing of the birds or the flowers, of the streams and the trees and the hills, but having just totaled up so many miles on such an expenditure of gas. Save on your gas and enjoy the scenery as you go along through life. Just put that into operation—save on your gas and see more of the scenery!

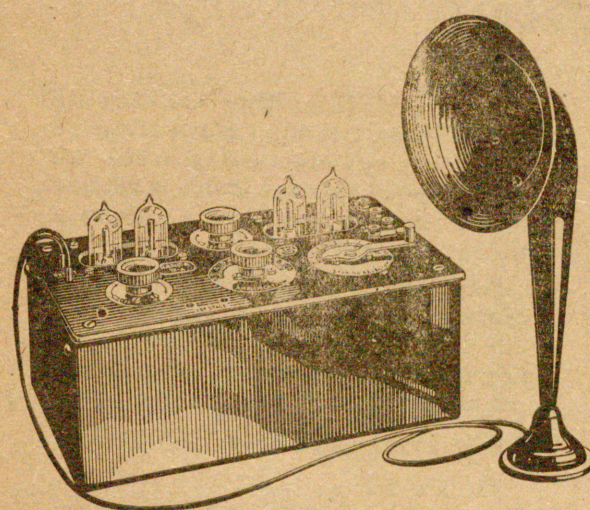

WHY FARMING DECLINED

A review of the present status of agriculture in New England has shown that the more important contributing causes of the condition which exists are: Waste of farm resources; failure to understand and practice the fundamental principles of business; lack of an adequate program of farm management and soil management, with the attendant depletion of soil fertility; choice of unsuitable and oftentimes unmarketable varieties; the use of poor seed; the keeping and breeding of inferior animals; the use of purchased feeds instead of home grown grain; quantity instead of quality production; and failure to grade produce properly and according to law. The decline of New England agriculture presents a serious problem which deserves the most careful study.—Banker-Farmer.

Banks of Lee County, Mississippi, have a budget of $5,000 which they use in keeping an expert going about the county urging more dairying and better dairying, an advisor on all dairy operations. Two hundred cars of heifers and cows were shipped out of the county last year.

Another Theory of the Flood.

A new theory of the flood has been discovered in South Africa. Hydrographers investigating the waterways of Uganda have found indications that Lake Victoria and other central African lakes were at one time vast inland seas, which a little excess of rainfall would cause to overflow into the lands to the north. The discovery of primitive stone implements along the old water levels proves these to have been within the "human" period.

This is the Radiola IIIA a four tube set, operated with dry cell batteries. It comes complete with a Radiola Loud Speaker, Head Phones and four Radiotron tubes.

This set in the mahogany cabinets with built in Loud Speaker, space for batteries and installed complete for $112, is a real bargain, and it will give you plenty of long distance over the Loud Speaker.

Recently I received a letter from Miss Agnes White, Route No. 5, Lockport, Ill., who purchased one of these sets last spring, and she enclosed a list of 68 stations she had received. It completely covered the United States and a large part of Canada. This set being a Radiola, also works whenever you turn it on.

Any Radiola can be purchased on the time payment plan of 25 per cent down, plus interest when set is delivered and the balance in ten equal monthly payments.

If you are interested in Radio don't hesitate for a demonstration. It will not obligate you in anyway.

ORLAND

MARRIED AT WITT, ILL.

A very pretty and quiet home wedding took place last Saturday morning at 8:30 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C.B. Spooner at Witt, Ill., when their daughter, Velma, was united in marriage with Owen L. Dawson of Brookings, S. Dak. Rev. H. W. Hartman of the Witt M. E. church was the officiating clergyman.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served and the happy young couple left at 10:47 on a honeymoon trip to Chicago and St. Paul, from where they will go to Brookings to reside.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Dawson of Staunton, Ill. and at present holds the position of Agricultural Statistician for the state of South Dakota with offices at the State College at Brookings.

His bride is an exceptionally charming and accomplished young lady and the romance which culminated in Saturday's marriage had its inception some two years ago when Miss Spooner taught school at Springfield and Mr. Dawson was employed by the Illinois Agricultural Department with headquarters at Springfield.

Mr. Dawson will be well remembered by many Orland friends as he lived near Orland as a boy, graduating from the Joliet high school in 1911 and was at one time principal of the Orland public school.

The new pipe organ for the Christ Lutheran church is ready for shipment from the factory and will be installed sometime next.

At the village board meeting on Monday night Dr. Schussler said the young folks of the village were much in need of a community club and hall and he suggested that a movement should be launched for the purpose of organizing such an organization. He further suggested that the undertaking could be financed by issuing stock and forming a company and electing a board of directors to supervise all activities so everything would be run on a right system.

Mrs. Hannah Kochler, daughter of the late Rev. Schultze, has just undergone an operation at the Burnside hospital.

Special Lenten services will be held at the Christ Lutheran church on March 1st. German services on March 8th at 10 a. m. English services at 7:30 p. m.

Night Coughing Stopped Quickly By Simple Treatment

Thousands who are troubled with persistent coughing at night, which by robbing them of valuable sleep weakens their systems and lays them open to dangerous infections can quickly act to prevent this danger through a very simple treatment. People who have hardly been able to rest at all on account of coughing spells have found they can sleep the whole night through undisturbed often the first time they try it.

The treatment is based on a remarkable prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You simply take a teaspoonful at night before retiring, and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it, without following with water. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but it quickly loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the coughing. The result is you usually sleep soundly the very first night, and the entire cough condition goes in a very short time.

The prescription is highly recommended for coughs, chest colds, hoarseness, and bronchitis, and is wonderful for children's coughs and spasmodic croup—no harmful drugs. Economical, too, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for

REFORMS IN STATE SUPERVISION OF BANKS AS ADVOCATED BY BANKERS

By FRANK W. SIMMONDS
American Bankers Association

ALTHOUGH many states have unexcelled systems of bank supervision by public authority, in some instances political entanglements have resulted in lax methods and dangerous practices. Public opinion today demands that bank supervision be as free from partisan interference as the judiciary itself.

State banking laws are increasing in number and diversity. Much thought and study has been given by the State Bank Division of the American Bankers Association to uniformly efficient supervision. It is on record as urging that the office of Bank Commissioner be freed from entangling politics and divorced from all other functions of state government; that the tenure of office be made more secure and lasting, with sufficient compensation and discretionary power to attract men of outstanding executive ability and successful banking experience, and that bank examiners be selected from those having the requisite qualifications.

A careful study and survey of state bank supervision has been made with the cooperation of State Bank Commissioners and state bankers to bring out the high lights of successful supervision, and at the same time indicate remediable weaknesses, as the basis for formulating a model code of law dealing with bank supervision, and also for developing public opinion in favor of its general adoption.

This survey shows that in forty-one states Bank Commissioners are appointed by the governors and generally hold office "during their pleasure." In two states they are chosen by popular election, in others they are chosen by a banking board, but in only a few is the advice of organized banking considered. In Mississippi the selection is made by a convention of delegates from the state chartered banks.

Long Terms Make Bureaucrats
The term of office was found to range from two years to six. The majority of recommendations favor a five-year term, reasoning that a long term of life tenure tended toward bureaucracy in office, while a short term was condemned on the grounds that the Bank Commissioner would scarcely have time to become thoroughly conversant with his field of work before the expiration of his term of service and the public would lose the fruits of his experience. A five year term is long enough to permit his rendering useful service through capitalizing his experience and then if he is found capable the chances of his reappointment would be strong.

It was found that duties other than bank supervision are frequently imposed on the banking department, ranging from insurance matters to irrigation projects and even state hail insurance. The almost unanimous expression of opinion is that the position of bank commissioner is a task of such outstanding importance as to demand that he devote all his time and attention strictly to problems of bank supervision and regulation.

Some states impose no statutory qualifications whatever for Bank Commissioner. A number merely require that he have nominal qualifications, in many cases purely negative.

The consensus as to changes needed to strengthen the work of the state banking departments is summarized in the following recommendations:

1. Provide adequate salaries.
2. Give Bank Commissioner large discretionary power in granting charters and enforcing bank regulations.
3. Remove the office from partisan politics by providing for election or nomination of the Commissioners by the bankers.
4. Provide for a sufficient number of examiners, with adequate pay and free their appointment from politics.
5. Give the Banking Department full authority by providing for election or nomination of the Commissioners by the bankers.
6. Make Bank Commissioners' terms five years.
7. Make requirements for Bank Commissioner eligibility not less than five years of successful banking experience and, well recognized executive ability.

Bank supervision, when wisely and impartially administered, is capable of rendering one of the highest types of service a state can give its people.

Lesson for March 1 CHRIST BEFORE PILATE

LESSON TEXT—Matt. 27:11-31.
GOLDEN TEXT—"He was wounded for our transgressions; He was bruised for our iniquities."—Isa. 53:5.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How Wicked Men Tried Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Trial of Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Trial of Jesus.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christ Before Pilate.

In order to have a proper perspective for this lesson it will be helpful if we view in their proper relations our Lord's trials.

A. Ecclesiastical.

1. Before Annas (John 18:13).

2. Before Calaphas and the Sanhedrin (Matt. 26:57, 59-66; Mark 14:53, 55-64; Luke 22:54; John 18:19-24). This was an irregular meeting and held at night.

3. Before the Sanhedrin (Matt. 27:1; Luke 22:66-71). This was held at daybreak and was a formal meeting.

B. Civil.

1. Before Pilate (Matt. 27:11-26).

The ecclesiastical powers had voted a sentence of death upon Jesus, but they lacked the right to inflict capital punishment, as this power had been taken from them by the Romans. For this reason they delivered Him to Pilate, the Roman governor. It was in the early morning after the mock trial before the high priests and Peter's denial that they bound Jesus and delivered Him to Pilate. It turned out, therefore, that both Jews and Gentiles were guilty of the crucifixion of the Savior.

1. Pilate Questions Jesus (vv. 11-14).

(1) "Art thou the King of the Jews?" (v. 11). When the trial was transferred from the Sanhedrin to Pilate they changed their charge of blasphemy to that of sedition or treason.

(2) Jesus' answer (v. 11). He admitted His claim to being a king but explained that His Kingdom was not of this world, else would His servants fight to put Him on the throne (John 18:3, 37). He declared that He was born and had come into the world to this end.

(3) "Hearest Thou not how many things they witness against Thee?" (v. 13). The members of the Sanhedrin—the priests and the elders—joined in their accusation against Him. They brought a three-fold charge (Luke 23:2).

(a) Perverting the nation—guilty of sedition.

(b) Forbidding to pay taxes to the Roman government.

(c) Claiming to be a king, thus changing the charge from a religious to a political one.

(4) Jesus' Behavior (v. 14). His silence under such provocation greatly astonished Pilate.

2. Pilate Giving a Choice Between Jesus and Barabbas (vv. 15-26).

(1) The offer made (v. 17). It was the annual custom at great festivals to release a prisoner chosen by the people. Because he knew that for envy they had delivered Jesus he gave them the choice between Barabbas and Jesus. After several unsuccessful efforts to escape responsibility the expediency of letting the people choose between Barabbas and Jesus was resorted to. Pilate no doubt thought they would choose Jesus rather than the notorious Barabbas.

(2) A message from Pilate's wife (v. 19). She warned him against having anything to do in the condemnation of Christ.

(3) The choice made (v. 21). Influenced by the warning from his wife Pilate wished to give Jesus another chance by having the people choose between the innocent and the guilty. They actually chose the notorious criminal Barabbas instead of Christ.

(4) The demand that Christ be crucified (vv. 22, 23). Pilate, the judge, showed great weakness in asking the crowd in the court room what should be done with the prisoner. With one voice they cried, "Let him be crucified."

(5) Pilate washes his hands (v. 24). This was the sign that he was innocent of the blood of Jesus, but guilt could not be so easily removed. The blood of Jesus was on his hands.

(6) The people's awful choice (v. 25). The history of the Jews from that day to this shows how awful has been the execution of this curse upon them.

(7) Jesus scourged (v. 26). It seems to have been the custom to scourge before crucifying. This was so terrible that sometimes the victim died as the result of it. Pilate stands for the man of expediency. The opportunist is a most contemptible man.

II. Before Herod (Luke 23:7-11).

The Best Man

The best man is the one who wishes and seeks best. His ability to do may be limited, but he touches his restrictions.—Presbyterian Record.

In Our Prayer

In prayer it is better to have a heart without words than words without a heart.—Bunyan.

To Win Souls

If you want to win souls, love them, seek them, go where they are.

SAFETY MEANS PREPAREDNESS

Coolidge Says We Can Thwart Aggression Without Being Militaristic.

Washington.—The United States should set an example to the world by "moderation in armament and should invite others to pursue a similar program," President Coolidge said.

At the same time the President declared his opposition to the idea of "abolishing our army and navy."

The American people, the President emphasized, should be "determined and able to defend" themselves, but without any "intent of aggression."

Mr. Coolidge delivered his views in an address before the Women's National Conference on National Defense as Peace Insurance. The nations of the world, he said, will "be able to reduce the strength and cost of armament" as "we advance toward security under the law."

The President emphasized the point that "about in proportion as the nations shall make progress in creating effective tribunals for the peaceful settlement of international differences, they will find themselves able to lessen their military establishments." He added:

"If the rule of law were established and certain, then there would be far less need of armaments."

"We shall hardly disagree on the proposition that peace is decidedly preferable to war. But in this presence I feel safe in saying also that our country does not wish for weakness. The only enduring peace must be the peace of law, of order, of security and honor. Such a peace we wish for ourselves, and we devoutly wish to share it with every neighbor in the family of nations."

"The members of this conference are earnestly in favor of peace. I think, on terms which will assure the national dignity and safety. We are compelled to recognize that national safety requires such a measure of preparedness as shall be the guaranty against aggression, without committing the nation to militarism. For the present, the most we can hope is to secure general acceptance in good faith and without reservation of the view that whatever armaments we create, whatever preparations we make, shall be limited to the reasonable requirements of security."

"A country so powerful in numbers and wealth, so fortunate in its location, as our own, can and should set an example of moderation in armament, and should invite others to pursue a similar program. I do not think we would set a good example by abolishing our army and navy."

"I believe that much can be done to assure other nations that this is our aim and desire. And whenever a particular nation shall convince its neighbors of such a purpose of moderation without aggression, it will be easier for other nations to adopt a similar attitude."

"Earnestly as we desire the substitution of law for force, we shall not strip ourselves of the means of security. Even the most law-abiding communities do not dismiss their police forces. No more can a great nation take the risk of leaving itself to be menaced by disorder."

Quake Breaks Water Pipes and Chimneys in Alaska

Seward, Alaska.—Earthquake tremors, lasting a half minute, wrecked chimneys, broke water pipes and sent residents scurrying to safety in the streets. The Seward end of the United States signal corps cable to Valdez was broken.

Anchorage, Alaska.—One of the most severe earthquakes ever felt here rocked buildings of Anchorage for nineteen and one-half seconds.

President of Germany Ill With Appendicitis

Berlin.—President Ebert of Germany underwent an operation for appendicitis. It was declared a success. Chancellor Luther will be acting president during Herr Ebert's illness, as stipulated by the constitution.

President Ebert suffered an acute attack of appendicitis and inflammation of the gall ducts, making the operation by Professor Bier of Berlin university imperative.

Operate on Doris Kenyon, Actress, for Appendicitis

New York.—Doris Kenyon, stage and screen star, while rehearsing for a new picture, was seized with appendicitis and hurried to a hospital.

The doctor decided that an immediate operation was imperative. After the operation it was reported that Miss Kenyon had gone through it bravely and was doing well.

Osborne Wood in Spain

Paris.—Lieut. Osborne Wood has crossed the frontier into Spain and is now declared to be at San Sebastian. The French police are reported to hold a warrant for him for issuing a bad check for $1,750.

Inquire Into Vet Organizations

Washington.—Thirteen veterans' organizations are listed by the Department of Justice as "unworthy" and are being investigated, it was announced here.

WRIGLEY'S

The High Cost of Postponing Permanent Highway Building

Poor motor roads stifle industry and agriculture; waste huge sums annually in high maintenance costs, and greatly increase gasoline, tire and repair bills.

There is not a state, not a county, not a community, that isn't paying a heavy price for having too few permanent roads.

There are still many sections of the country—even whole states—that are trying to operate twentieth century traffic over nineteenth century roads.

This is costing millions of dollars every year, and will keep on costing millions until we have well developed permanent highway systems everywhere.

Even what we often call the more progressive communities are far behind the demands of modern highway traffic with its 16,000,000 motor vehicles.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from Canada to Mexico, we need more concrete roads—the roads for twentieth century traffic.

Your highway officials want to be of the greatest possible service to you. Get behind them with ways and means that will provide more concrete roads and streets. Such an investment will pay you big dividends year after year.

Orland Special License Ordinances Declared Void

man in the village including the village tonsorial artist who was slated to pay $10 a year license for the privilege of bobbing hair and shaving.
Recently the business men refused to pay their licenses and the village board threatened suit. The business men consulted attorney Krusemark of Frankfort and he appeared before the Board Monday night and by citing Supreme Court rulings he showed that the special license ordinances of Orland are void and illegal and cannot be enforced. The law prohibits licensing of every business only certain places of business as, a saloon, ice cream parlors, gas stations and lumber yards can be classed under special licenses and then the ordinances governing them contain certain regulation clauses. Those business men who have paid special licenses in Orland want their money back, amounting to $200.

Man and the Flowers.

The fragrance of plants is not for man's pleasure; it is a means of attracting insects to fertilize them. The object of many present-day florists is to improve a flower in its coloring, size and substance—in short to "paint the lily." They cannot improve the fragrance, which is perhaps the reason they seem to care so little for its disappearance under their handling.—Exchange.

Dairymen to Meet At Mokena Friday

Dairymen of Frankfort township have been invited to attend a special meeting to be held in the church parlors of the St. John church, Mokena on Friday afternoon at 1:30 to discuss a bill which has been introduced in our Illinois Legislature, which, if passed into a law, would compel the tuberculin testing of every dairy animal in Will County without providing adequate returns to the owners of animals condemned. This bill will protect the owners of beef and feeding cattle at the expense of the dairy farmer.

At this meeting prominent speakers will give addresses. Ways and means will be considered for protecting the dairy industry. Ladies are especially invited to attend.

Old-Time Remedy Best for Heavy Coughs

Stubborn, racking, deep-seated coughs that refuse to yield to other remedies are often checked overnight with the old-time cough medicine that our parents and grandparents "swore by." In spite of modern discoveries nothing has been found to replace good old Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar Honey for giving quick, sure relief for coughs, chest colds, bronchitis, spasmodic croup and other throat irritations. Doctors say that the pine tar quickly loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the coughing, while the honey not only gives a pleasant taste, but helps soothe irritation.

But be sure you get the original Dr. Bell's and no other. There have been dozens of imitations, but the original is still the best. It often stops the worst cough in 24 hours. Contains no injurious drugs, so can be given even to young children. Insist on Dr. Bell's. Only 30c at any good druggist's.

HOUSE WIRING CHATS

No. 2

Add Value to Your Home

Complete wiring is an investment.

When you install complete wiring you put into your home a value far in excess of the actual cost of wiring.

In these days of home comforts so easily obtainable with electric service, a buyer will be more likely to pay your price for a house that meets his electrical requirements.

Complete wiring, too, makes you appreciate your home the more. There is certain satisfaction in knowing that you are enjoying your electrical service in the fullest possible measure—that you have made electricity your household servant, instantly ready, always at hand.

We will without charge inspect your house or your plans and furnish you with estimate of cost of completely wiring your house.

Or you can obtain same from any electrical contractor.
